The Australian Privacy Foundation is intent on getting this important issue into the public eye.

One of the next steps we have taken is for me, as its Chair, to publish a piece in Online Opinion. It appeared this morning at:

Why it's time for guidelines on 'privacy and the media'

Is ARTK considering including the question of expanded Codes of Practice in its activities?

If not, it will be necessary for the APF to commence multiple bilateral communications with a large number of organisations. To the extent that we're successful in motivating organisations to act, the result will of course be a blizzard of inconsistent documents.

If this approach is the one that we need to take, does News Limited have a position on the matter?

Thanks ... Roger
