Dear Mr Conlon

The Australian Privacy Foundation (APF) is the country's leading privacy advocacy organisation. A brief backgrounder is attached.

I refer to the release of a tender for the Fare Collection System for the AdelaideMetro Public Transport System.

The APF acknowledges that there may be significant benefits for all concerned in a scheme like this. However, we request your assurance that the new design will address privacy issues satisfactorily.

The human right to freedom of movement within one's own country requires that people be able to travel anonymously, including on public transport. This has always been respected in State transport networks.

In addition, people want to avoid their travel patterns being stored in a government database, because to many this is very sensitive personal data.

Would you please confirm that the Requirements Statement for the scheme makes very clear that travel is to continue to be anonymous and that such data as is gathered will not be personally identifiable; and, further, that your Government will ensure that the delivered product conforms with that Requirement.

Thank you for your consideration.

Yours sincerely

Roger Clarke

Background Information

The Australian Privacy Foundation (APF) is the primary national association dedicated to protecting the privacy rights of Australians. The Foundation aims to focus public attention on emerging issues that pose a threat to the freedom and privacy of Australians. The Foundation has led the fight to defend the right of individuals to control their personal information and to be free of excessive intrusions.

The APF's primary activity is analysis of the privacy impact of systems and proposals for new systems. It makes frequent submissions to parliamentary committees and government agencies. It publishes information on privacy laws and privacy issues. It provides continual background briefings to the media on privacy-related matters.

Where possible, the APF cooperates with and supports privacy oversight agencies, but it is entirely independent of the agencies that administer privacy legislation, and regrettably often finds it necessary to be critical of their performance.

When necessary, the APF conducts campaigns for or against specific proposals. It works with civil liberties councils, consumer organisations, professional associations and other community groups as appropriate to the circumstances. The Privacy Foundation is also an active participant in Privacy International, the world-wide privacy protection network.

The APF's Board comprises professionals who bring to their work deep experience in privacy, information technology and the law.
